Note - The rest of the page is covered with scribbled calculations made by George's son, Albert, in later years.

They concern Pension, Rent, Licence and Taxes etc

After retiring from the army Albert spent a short period as a prison warder and then became proprietor of the Rowbarg Inn in Woking for 18 years until his death in 1902. He also had a number of vehicles and ran a horse-bus service from the inn. He regularly took officers from the Inkerman Barracks nearby to the railway station.
